Dear Pamela Monroe,

I was born and raised in New Hampshire and after 10 years away, recently moved back. I moved back because I believe in our state and am proud of it. As an elementary schooler I was taught about the amazing level of democratic participation our state is known for. It is sad for me to see that on such an important issue it seems like the voices of the people of this state aren't being taken seriously.

Not only would the Pass be devastating for the North Country, it is an outmoded way of thinking about our power grid. The future of energy is going to be in highly distributed forms of generation. Not only will that be more sustainable, it's also better for national security. Our power grid and power sources are consistently ranked one of our country's greatest liabilities for terrorist attacks. We need to focus on modernization, not old destructive forms of hydro power.

Sincerely,
Timothy King
